American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA)	County of St. Louis	ARPA makes multiple investments in state and local infrastructure, schools, and public health efforts. Part of ARPA directs hundreds of billions of dollars in more flexible federal aid and relief directly to states, cities, and counties. ARPA uses even broader language than prior pandemic-relief bills and authorizes state and local governments to use relief funds to "respond to the public health emergency" of Covid and its broader economic harms. The law explicitly authorizes use of these funds to backfill cuts made to government services during the pandemic, provide aid to nonprofits, and support essential workers and entities that employ essential workers (such as street outreach workers, and community safety, public health, and behavioral health professionals).	Determined at the discretion of St. Louis County government	The Biden/Harris administration and various federal departments have openly encouraged localities to use ARPA funds to address community violence and issued formal guidance clarifying that ARPA funds may be used for that very purpose.	St. Louis County received $193 million in American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds, to be distributed over a three-year period. The county received its first allotment of $96.5 million on August 13, 2021. The adopted FY22 budget includes the transfer of $80 million from the ARPA award to the General Revenue and Health funds as revenue replacement under the State and Local Fiscal Recovery Funds (SLFRF) program, which must be used for the provision of government services under US Treasury requirements. Therefore, the ARPA funding is being used to support the continuation of existing programs and services. Of the original $193 million in ARPA funds, approximately $101 million has already been spent, and $65.9 million remains to be appropriated.	State and local governments started receiving ARPA funds in May 2021 and must obligate these funds by the end of 2024 and spend them down completely by the end of 2026. so this is a current and time-sensitive opportunity for St. Louis County.	https://stlouiscountymo.gov/open-data/covid-19-expenditures/arpaslfrf-funding/
Community Development Block Grants	Office of Community Development	As the recipient of federal CDBG funds, the Office of Community Development disburses much of its annual allocation to county agencies and nonprofit organizations through a competitive solicitation process, to "undertake community development activities in the county that meet one of three National Objectives: 1. Benefit low and moderate income persons 2. Prevent or eliminate slums or blight 3. Address community development needs having a particular urgency because existing conditions pose a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community for which other funding is not available."	Nonprofit organizations and departments of St. Louis County government. Municipalities, for-profit entities, and individuals are NOT eligible to apply.	According to the solicitation, community-identified priority issues for the program in 2022 included vacation reduction and crime prevention in the St. Louis County Promise Zone, which includes many areas of North County, where community violence is disproportionately concentrated.	$4 million	Open July 1, 2022; Applications were due July 27, 2022	https://stlouiscountymo.gov/st-louis-county-departments/human-services/community-development/community-development-block-grants/notice-of-funding-availability-2023/
